Show What You Know® Publishing partners with iRespond technology

Show What You Know® Publishing has teamed up with Florida-based educational technology company Wireless eSystems, Inc., producers of iRespond classroom systems, to supply students with everything they need to succeed in school and on state assessments.

In addition to providing skill-building, intervention, and test-preparation workbooks and flash cards, Show What You Know® Publishing will now offer iRespond classroom technology, including student response systems, assessment report software, and an interactive whiteboard.

“We are proud to offer our customers our products packaged along with a quality student response system that engages students, allowing them to review, interact with, and benchmark their standards-based strengths and weaknesses in real time, which will give teachers back the valuable time they need for further quality instruction,” said Show What You Know® Publishing President Cindi Englefield. “We are happy to partner with a company with the same core values that focus on high quality education, student engagement, and student achievement.”

All iRespond student response systems capture each student’s answer and produce real-time diagnostic reports, showing where students are excelling and where to focus intervention. Products range from the iRespond-UltraLite that simply records students’ answer choices to the iRespond-Touch, which features a graphics-capable touch remote screen. iRespond was selected by the readers of District Administration magazine as one of the Top 100 K-12 products for 2007-2008.

Studies show that classroom technology successfully engages every student in classroom activities, and some studies found an increased interest in school in students who use classroom technology, such as student response systems and interactive whiteboards.

Show What You Know® Publishing will also provide schools with other iRespond materials, such as interactive white boards, projectors, and CDs of state standard aligned content.
